Blockchain A digital file distributed to everyone involved in a crypto-currency network. The block block acts as a type of ledger, which tracks all transactions that take place on the network. Everyone can look at the Blockchain to see what transactions have been made on the network, and the block block is sealed using cryptography so no one can manipulate it. Bot A program that automates a simple action so that it can be done repeatedly at a much higher speed and for a longer period of time than a human operator. Bots are, in themselves, benign and used for many legitimate purposes, such as delivering content online. However, bots are often used along with cracking. For example, robots can be maliciously used to make content calls that include denial-of-service attacks. "BotA¢" is also a term used to refer to hijacked individual computers that make up a botnet. BotNet A group of controlled computers without the knowledge of their owners and used to send spam or to make denial of services attacks. The malware is used to hijack individual computers, also known as "Zombies, a" - and to send them instructions. Bureau of Prisons The Federal Agency that houses federal inmates. The BOP is part of the Department of Justice.
