In November 2019, I made a short trip to Bangalore to attend my wedding of friends a cultural shock in India. One of the first things I associated with India was the word. I had an approximate idea about this topic and with this, I mean dancing and colored clothes is more like it but never really entered it. (This post contains affiliate links, which means I get a certain percentage of a sale if you buy after clicking.) However, with my upcoming trip to India, I had a good reason and so I asked my friend in Bollywood what the film recommended. I saw many of the most popular and, to my surprise, I started to like them. In addition to the deep and touching stories that most of them without even watching the movie. I was so happy when I met a handful of songs played at the wedding thanks to my preparation. For the last two months, I've found and added more of these songs to my ever-growing playlist. If I feel down, sad, or just stressed out every time I listen to these Bollywood songs, I feel immediately better. They have that kind of energy that makes me dance and jump around like crazy. This year has been so bad, musically, it's been so bad, while this could be true largely because of the heavy influx of remix of taste, a can; "and we also deny how there were a good number of songs that deserved a listen or two or two;" or more; the most. Here is the list of 2019s'best Hindi movie songs that, predictably, overlap remix. Did you miss the Shankar-Ehsaan-Loy sound of the 2000's? You missed Alyssa Mendonsa226; Are you a delightful English Hindi pronunciation? If one of these is a yes, you're a yes; From Factor Zoya. Also the texts written by Amitabh Bhattaarya are oh-so-2000a 128; s in its flavor. Tu khat mera, gold khat ka pata Come here, 226 Croon the lovers and you get the gist. Arijit Singh is a bit repetitive and remains a mystery because © Both singers do not pronounce the word correctly despite the title song. The most fascinating aspect of this slow romantic number by Panipat is the operative instrumental piece running in the background. While adding a larger aura of life to the song, the song continues to grow more robust as it progresses; Then he pauses, allowing the singers to put their voices to great use. Abhay Jodhpurkar and Shreya Ghioshal form a formidable duo and effortlessly slide the song the great editing and live poetry (Javed Akhtar). The dramatic part of the chorus is the cherry on the cake. Personally, I am no longer a fan of pure throaty high-octane numbers because the genre has gone for an overkill today. However, for a love story focused on extreme sports, Ho Jaa from PAL PAL DIL KE PAAS is a fairly good number that actually actuall by Siddharth-Garima, the song sees the singers in their best enthusiastic, with Monali Thakur who triggers a completely new dimension in her voice despite the intermittent strains. The ECHO effect, even if cliché D, works well with the way the song was turned. A simple song that emanates the atmosphere composed of a guitar, this dulcet Armaan Malik-sung number from Kabir Singh shines in the conventional skin of him. Although it is a little Irksome to listen to Malik over-emote in places, the voice of him is quite fluid to not tire anywhere. The texts are rather pedestrian, but versatile tuning, minimal instrumentation and enthusiasm make memorable. A desire that remains is that the song may have been much better if it was mellower. Let's blame the time we live. Rap as an effective sub-genre in cinematographic music was still fully established in Hindi cinema until Gully Boy hit the industry as a huge truck. A dance number with the main men (Ranveer Singh and Siddhant Chaturvedi), the texts (divine and Naezy) steal the show here and predictably so. The Verve and the rhythm are very tandem with the overall wrist of the film and only helps that it comes with some Snazzy choreography. A dance number set around the first war for independence in the presence of Rani Laxmi Bai. The brief given to the composers and the lyrics themselves is nutrously and one that can be easily passed on the condition that they displayed it with people who were not fictitious beings. To give Shankar-ehsaan-Loy the credit due, 'Dankila' gets the folk-bollywood mixture up to the limit and ends up a song cracker. The processed instrumentation corresponds to the extraordinary energy of the singers (Prajukta Shukre, Shrinidhi Ghatato, Siddharth Mahadevan and which led to a song that is not anachronistic. Oh, man, you got a KK microphone for that. I was sold looking at his on the jukebox but, wait, there's a reason why Pritam hired the beloved vocalist for this cheerful, nostalgic number. The simple strumming behind training integrates KK, especially in the top notes. The flute that accompanies the hook line is yet another delightful element in this cheerful number. We are aware of Bollywoodâs obsession with Arijit Singh and all the things that Punjabi in nature. However, in a rare case where both elements have hit the bull's eye, Kesari's "Ve Maahiâ€TM boasts a certain purity in its melody. While the tools (loved shehnai, of all) used are appropriate for the era, the programming makes the output appear a bit contemporary. Towards the end of Saand Ki Aankh a song appeared which struck me completely by surprise. Unlike the main performances of the movie, here's a song that immediately carried me into the mental space of two elderly women who want the best for their children. No, it didn't take me long enough to identify the voice behind this number of situations â Asha Bhosle. Composer Vishal Mishra keeps the minimum score with a flute piece and a light percussion doing the needy while letting the legendary singer's voice spin all the magic. Raj Shekhar's lyrics are narrative but rather perfect for the overall narrative style of the film. The most conventional number on the list, perhaps, the title track of Pal Dil Ke Paas comes with some fantastic instrumentation, which is clearly why the song deserves this rank. The percussion mix created with beautifully launched tabla strains gives it a retro delectable feel while the contemporary elements, too, blend with equal plumes. As much as I appreciate the re-recording here, Sachet-Parampara's melody is just as smooth and easy on the ears. If nothing else, a stellar music score is one thing We'd expect an Ashutosh Gowariker movie. It's one of the rare Bollywood who could sell the idea of group songs to mainstream Hindi movie viewers. In his latest war drama Panipat, Gowariker recreates the impulse of Jodhaa Akbar⦠"Azeem-O-Shaan Shehenshah⦠in the pounding "Mard Marathaâ¦" Ajay-Atul composers keep the melodic quotient first while Javed Akhtar's evocative lyrics only add to the effect. One of the most popular numbers of 2019, "Tum Hi Aana", is composed by singer Payal Dev. Now, I can't remember the last time a composer delivered a chartbuster of this size. Having said that, aside from the genre aspect, this Marjaavaan love song is a real sanitary treat. The hook line, in particular, has a characteristic classic shade, reminiscent of the 70s. The minimal instrumentation allows the voices of Jubin Nautiyal and Payal Dev to take over and the impact is rock solid. It's not easy to distribute a number of trippy clubs and that's why music labels insist on remixing the chartbuster of the past. Many times they work out of nostalgia, but the sizzle turns off a month or two after the movie's release. Yash Raj Filmsâs insistence on producing only originals pays off for Vishal-Shekhar, who produce a touching piece in the genre that Arijit Singh has in its absolute elements. The re-recording mix is equally bold, making it a sure hit for young people who burn the dance floors. Even the charan part where the rhythm drops is well balanced with the overall liveliness of the song. I miss Gulzar. As a director. As a writer of dialogues. As a lyricist. Speaking of the latest, I miss looking for new words in the Hindi dictionary. "Dil Hi To Hai" made me do it for "kooche" and "khurpech". The track very hummable. The Antara Mitra portions sound better just because they don't an explicit use of acute. That said, I I lost my heart to the song when Singh said, "Na doggie, dil hai Munshi, Magistrate, Qazi", followed by a brilliant accordion. Maybe it is Take a step! Say hello to the hottest Hindi movie song of the 2019. I've had it in my mouth since the first time I heard it in Dream Girl's trailer. Wasted and civil to the hillside, Jonita Gandhi sings it with gay abandon. In addition to the ability, Dil Ka Telephone must also be one of the songs best used in a film. A simple and sweet poem (Kumaar) with a melody from the flavor of the 1990s (Meet Bros) easily adds to the charm of the songs. Shreya Ghoshal, everybody. Shreya ghoshal. In the age of extreme mediocrity, yours is a name that adds weight to a playlist by default. Although Kabir Singh boasts a list of decent love songs, the best number is the solo of Ghoshala "Yeh Aainah" which could easily have been ordinary if crowned by a less skilled singer. The composer (Amaal Malik) gives you the opportunity to pass through a series of high and low notes. Quite simple in its compositional structure, even the lyrics of Irshad Kamil convey a lot of sentiment. Sometimes you watch a movie and a visual element or an element continues to haunt you for days, weeks, months and more. Sonchiriya's title track did this to me. The disturbing sight of the film's protagonists sailing on a small canoe and the song appears in the background. The evocative voices of Rekha Bhardwaj are borne out by the composer Vishal Bhardwaj are borne out by the composer Vishal Bhardwaj are borne out by the composer Vishal Bhardwaj. Varun Grover's lyrics contain an introspective quality and it would be equally pleasant to read them as poems. This semi-classic issue for Kalank, for starters, gains brownie points purely for bringing the genre back to Bollywood from extinction. When was the last time we heard of Sargami in a Hindi movie song? Frankly, I don't remember. And on Pritam's credit, the song was designed with the utmost care. cure. Making justice to its kind and making it even commercially salable (read, hummable). Shreya Ghoshal is in his absolute elements while he takes the rare opportunity that the song represents. The lyrics of Amitabh Bhattacharya, who speak of chapters of the Ramayana, are properly included in this number of high energy, but at least melodious. Mard Ko Dard Nahi Hota is a crackling contemporary Ost and I had difficulty choosing one of my favorites. Â «Nakhrewali» is the best choice to be full of attitude regarding texts, composition and interpretation. Strong instrumentation, the piece melts voice sounds and substrate with dexterity without tearing the song from his melodic quotient. In some places, the song resembles the sound of a Rahman of the years â € 1 90, which is not an ordinary compliment at all. The singer-composer Karan Kulkarni is really a talent to keep from the eye in the Hindi Mainstream cinema. The song that closed Gully Boy with style. The text is present on thousands of t-shirts and sweatshirts. Â «Apna Time Aayegaâ» could be the Single PiÃf1 successful and complete with all the 2019 movies. That said, the song better closing song? Not entirely. While there is a lot to write about Manikarnika as a movie, there is a lot to appreciate for its soundtrack. In the romantic A «Rajajia», Shankar-Ehsaan-Loy reveals their new facet working on a folkloristic melody perfectly in harmony with the era in which the story is set. The instrumentation, played on traditional instruments, is extremely pleasant «Especially percussion. TERROSE VOCALS Pratibha Singh add further brightness to Prasoon Joshi. Josh. words. I'd like to start with a small complaint. This Vishal-Shekhar song is highly substitutable. I mean, put him in any Ali Abbas Zafar movie with his favorite Salman Khan and Katrina Kaif, that would be perfect. But the sizzle in the composition is such that it gives us a ray of pride for Hindi films that have the culture of singing and dancing. Sung with a great freshness of Abhijeet Srivastava, the song is shamefully formulated and yet so engaging if you love the classical sound of music in Bollywood. Even small things like keeping your beats prominent enough to beat your feet (or palms), the song is designed to make you hum, smile, dance and fantasize. When it comes to a Bollywood love song, I love the elements that put an immediate smile on my face. Udit Narayan226; Name has such a quality. Five seconds in this Ajay-Atul composition, the brilliant singing voice illuminates things. When the song reached the line, Zara's kitabon mein226; ~ I was absolutely immersed in his magic. Of course, the song is in the duo composer who tried-and-tested style but didn226; Matter a bit since the packaging was a delight from the word. The elaborate style of orchestration is of the variety (note that piece of violin in the middle) that would make us want the song to go on for a few minutes. Overall Shreya Ghostal, the song written by Amitabh Bhattaarya talks about mathematics and geography while expressing love. I like it. It would be a surprise to say that, on this date, it is Sanjay director Leela Bhansali who composes the best songs for Shreya Ghostal in Hindi films. The fact is demonstrated once again with this underestimated number for Malaal that comes with an unusual melody. Both with the background, is a unique mix that music Bollywood mainstream no longer creates. The sound, the sound, the sound, it must add, remember Sandeep Chowta of the early 2000s. A. Mr. Even the texts of turazà ¢ ⤤â € œThe shine of a certain vintage shine, while the instrumentation is deliberately maintained minimal to allow Ghoshal to hover in realms of magnitude, as happens with several pieces of the list. Ok, then Parineeti Chopra does not get the best of the films, despite the proven talent of him. Instead, he occasionally landed in mega-blockbusters, playing tiny parts. Okay, we don't get into trouble of her career as an actress and go straight to the point. People, Parineeti Chopra has a phenomenal singer voice, and I can't thank enough composers who have chosen to take her to go behind the microphone. That unusually rough voice is as original that Chopra can easily give many singers contemporary professionals a race for their money. In the version of Kesari, Parineeti Chopra blows fire. It is the kind of yield that you will pour abundant tears. I do not deny that the composition (Arko Pravo Mukherjee) and the text (Manoj Muntashir) are less components than the song, since they also contribute extensively to make it the most beautiful song of the year, but it is the deeply felt voice of Chopra to bring the cake and all pastry out. To give credit, even the male version of B Praak is immensely moving and he would still have deserved a leading place (if not the same place) in the absence of a female version. PS: the last time that Parineeti Chopra has lent his voice to a cinematographic song was in 2017 of Meri Pyari Bindu and, curiously, the song (Maana Ke Hum Yaar Nahin) was at the top of the Quellâ € list we generated the top of the Quellâ € list to possible to a cinematographic song was in 2017 of Meri Pyari Bindu and, curiously, the song (Maana Ke Hum Yaar Nahin) was at the top of the Quellâ € list to possible to a cinematographic song was in 2017 of Meri Pyari Bindu and, curiously, the song (Maana Ke Hum Yaar Nahin) was at the top of the Quellâ € list to possible to a cinematographic song was in 2019 of the Quellâ € list to possible to a cinematographic song was in 2019 of the Quellâ € list to possible to a cinematographic song was in 2019 of the Quellâ € list to possible to a cinematographic song was in 2019 of the Quellâ € list to possible to a cinematographic song was in 2019 of the Quellâ € list to possible to a cinematographic song was in 2019 of the Quellâ € list to possible to a cinematographic song was in 2019 of the Quellâ € list to possible to a cinematographic song was in 2019 of the Quellâ € list to possible to a cinematographic song was in 2019 of the Quellâ € list to possible to a cinematographic song was in 2019 of the Quellâ € list to possible to a cinematographic song was in 2019 of the Quellâ € list to possible to a cinematographic song was in 2019 of the Quellâ € list to possible to a cinematographic song was in 2019 of the Quellâ € list to possible to a cinematographic song was in 2019 of the Quellâ € list to possible to a cinematographic song was in 2019 of the Quellâ € list to possible to a cinematographic song was in 2019 of the Quellâ € list to possible to a cinematographic song was in 2019 of the Quellâ € list to possible to a cinematographic song was in 2019 of the Quellâ € list to possible to a cinematographic song was in 2019 of the Quellâ € list to possible to a cinematographic song was in 2019 of the Quellâ € list to possible to a cinematographic was a cinematographic was a cinematograp to Your Mother.
