The easiest way to distribute an Android app is via Google Play Store. It is not the only method of distribution, but it is the easiest way to reach millions of potential users. Publishing your first app in the Play Store is not difficult, with some suggestions and pointers you can have your app ready for download in a few hours at no time. Google has a $25 registration fee from $25 that you need to pay before you can upload an app. The starting point is the Google Play developer console. A Dashboard dedicated to Google for developers that lets you manage your apps in the Play Store. Google has a $25 recording fee that you need to pay before you can upload an app. Google says that encourages superior quality products, ie less spam. If you don't like the idea, then helps to watch Apple and Microsoft policies for their app stores. Apple charge $99 a year. Microsoft fees between $12 and $99 per year, depending on the type of account. They must also be in a supported country to distribute apps. Countries such as the United States, the United Kingdom, Canada and Australia are in the approved Google list, but countries like New Zealand and Singapore Aren't. Furthermore, some of the recent additions to the European Union such as Romania, Slovakia, Czech and Slovenia do not make it to the Google list. After signing and paid the registration fee, you need to complete the details of the account, including the developer name and the name displayed on Google Play Store. Once everything is done, you may have to wait a little officially can take up to 48 hours for your Google Play developer registration to be completely processed. This point is probably worth taking a look at the Google Play Policy Apps center the help center for Android developers to avoid loading content that is in violation of the terms and conditions of Google Play. All apps that violate terms and conditions will be suspended from the store and repeated violations can lead to the termination of your developer account. It probably looks worse than what is actually. If you are creating original and well-educated apps, then you don't really have to worry. Before loading your app to the Google Play Store you have to prepare some things. One of the questions needed to respond during the publication process concerns the evaluation of your App's maturity. Google has four levels of assessment: all, low expiration, average expiry and high expiration. Google has a guide to help you evaluate the content of the App for Google Play. Basically if your app includes references to alcohol, tobacco, drugs, gambling or violence, will have to bring one of the major ratings of maturity. The apps with a slight comic violence must carry the minimum rating of the deadline. The list of gaming stores is probably one of the most important elements to promote your app. You must also look at the final size of your app. Google only allows apps of 50 MB or not to be published as a single APK file. All apps that exceed the size must use API API APK Open Android. With it you can build your app so that it is downloaded up to an additional 4 GB from Google servers. On most devices, Google Play downloads extra data simultaneously to the app. In some cases, however, the app must download files from Google Play when it starts. The Play Store list is probably one of the most important elements, to promote your app. A list of poor play shops will behave in a few downloads and probably negative comments. Your Play Store list must be engaging, informative and friendly. To help you attract users, Google allows you to provide a variety of promotional, videos and screenshots that will appear in the list of apps on the playstore. Because these graphs are a fundamental part of a list of successful game stores, Google says that "you should consider having a professional produces them for you." "The graphics of the features must be bold, vivid, funny and tempting. The IL Graphics you need are screenshots. You must provide at least two phone screenshots. However, for the best results, you can upload 8 screenshots (the most allowed by Google). You should also load shots of your app screen running on a 7-inch tablet and a 10-inch tablet. Google instructions say that "for your app to submit to the list of apps designed for the tablet list "in the playstore, you need to load at least one 10-inch screenshot and one of 10 inches. Together with the screenshots needed to prepare an HD icon (512 x 512), a function graphics (1024 x 500) and a promotional graph (180 x 120). The last two are marked as optional, but you should really consider them as mandatory. Without a feature image your app cannot be present anywhere within Google Play. Example of a good image in the foreground. Example of a good image in the foreground. The graphics of features must be bold, vivid, fun and tempting. It should use colors that stand out on simple wallpapers and should promote your brand. It should not be heavy text and nor should be overloaded with graphic details. Something more of the name of the app and maybe some descriptive words will be lost on smaller screens. Price setting to free it is permanent, you can not change it to pay once published. The final part of the game store list is to set the price of your app and where countries should be distributed. If the app is free, simply just point out as free. However it is worth noting that establishing the price for free is permanent, you can't change it to pay once published. For paid apps you need to set the price. You can simply set the price in USD and then allow Google to calculate prices for each of the local markets, or you can set prices individually for different currencies. The latter option gives you the flexibility to regulate local prices based on market conditions and exchange rates. It is satisfied with your Play Store list you can upload the APK file and click the Publish button. It takes a few hours to appear the app. The publication process is automatic and is not too long before your app becomes available for download.
