AdBlock also protects your browser from malware and prevents advertisers from accessing your browsing history and personal information. AdBlock for Chrome works automatically. Just click "Add to Chrome" then go to your favorite website and watch the ads disappear! Choose whether you want to continue seeing unobtrusive ads, whitelist your favorite sites, or block all ads by default. AdBlock participates in the Acceptable Ads program, so websites are not blocked by default for non-intrusive ads. We believe that users should be in control of what they see online, so you can easily opt out in your AdBlock settings. =======12 cards. But it doesn't actually track your browsing history and doesn't require your personal information to work properly. In a world where online advertising is a mustAd blockers that provide free access to websites are becoming increasingly popular. Unfortunately, many website business models abuse this with intrusive pop-up ads, cookie trackers, and rampant scammers. Fortunately, with ad blocking, Chrome users can avoid annoying ads and prevent intrusive ad companies from tracking what they do online! From the start, these are the best ad blocking Google Chrome extensions available. Total Adblock - The best Adblock extension for Google Chrome. A comprehensive and powerful ad blocking solution that can block ads, malware and more. AdLock - A great Chrome ad blocking solution with the best cross-platform compatibility. Works seamlessly with browsers, apps and more. AdGuard – A great standalone ad blocker with a great Chrome browser extension. It offers impressive customization options. uBlock Origin - The best free ad blocker for Chrome users. It has a solid reputation and is truly an open source provider. Adblock Plus - The most popular ad blocker for Chrome. This is one of the most original and best ad blockers, both in Chrome and in other browsers. In-Depth Analysis of the Best Chrome Ad Blocking Extensions Our experts have reviewed almost every Google Chrome ad blocking extension on the market, and we think these six are the best today. All of the options below (except AdLock) have free tiers and provide excellent protection against intrusive ads and website tracking. Total Adblock is the best Adblock extension for Google Chrome. With the paid version, you also get TotalAV (antivirus), malware and spyware protection. Total Adblock is a Chrome extension that effectively blocks annoying ads, trackers, and pop-ups. The paid version also includes proprietary antivirus, TotalAV anti-malware and spyware protection, and exclusive YouTube ad blocking. In addition, this ad blocker makes your browsing safer and faster by deleting cookies. Total ad blockera great choice for Chrome users, but it also works great in all other popular browsers including Firefox, Microsoft Edge, and Opera. Block unwanted ads, trackers, notifications, and more Total Adblock not only blocks ads and trackers while browsing Google Chrome, but also helps you: enjoy uninterrupted ad-free video watching with autoplay, prevent third-party devices from tracking your online activities Avoid ads and followers on popular social platforms such as YouTube and Facebook. Limit ads and trackers on streaming sites like ESPN and CNN. Block ads on the go with Total Adblock Enjoy browsing Firefox, Microsoft Edge, Opera and more without annoying ads and notifications. User Service Another great benefit of Total Adblock is that you can skip any ads you find useful or at least acceptable thanks to the Acceptable Ads option. It's always good to be able to manage your wishlist and the ads you see on it. Also, by whitelisting your favorite sites, you support them by allowing them to show you their ads. Go Premium While the free version of Total Adblock offers decent (but limited) protection against suspicious ads and trackers, the premium version has great added benefits. Initially, you will no longer see the update pop-ups that bother some users. More importantly, you can block unlimited ads, even on YouTube, and get award-winning antivirus protection for free. So for a fraction of the cost of an average ad blocker, you get layered protection for all your devices. Also, if you are a first time subscriber, you can also take advantage of some of the great discounts this company often provides. A great all-in-one ad blocker for Chrome and more. AdLock is a lightweight, highly effective system-level ad blocker that can protect not only browsers, but all types ofAlso. AdLock is not a browser extension, but a standalone app that runs on the device of your choice and supports five different devices in one subscription, as well as apps for Mac, iOS, and Android (although not through the Play Store, the APK needs to be installed manually). device) and a Windows PC. It not only protects Chrome, but all other apps and browsers as well. It can even block YouTube ads! Reasonably priced Unlike some of the other options on this list, AdLock doesn't have a free tier. However, we think it's worth your money because it offers affordable monthly, yearly, or two-year subscription options. We think it's a great choice for both mobile and desktop users, and if you don't quite like it, it comes with a 30-day money-back guarantee so you can leave it risk-free and give it a try. Flexible support One of the benefits of using a paid product instead of a free one is that you get decent customer support. In our testing, we found that the AdLock support team was very responsive to our questions and updated their filters within hours when we flagged sites that weren't working properly. None of the free options on this list will give you such a quick answer. The complete AdLock app blocker not only can block ads, but also has a built-in firewall feature to restrict internet connection for apps and browsers. This is especially important if you use mobile broadband as they often have pretty tight download limits where every megabyte counts. Thanks to AdLock, you can restrict internet connections to browsers, instant messengers, or only selected apps. This way you can make sure nothing is downloading a massive update in the background that will eat up your quota. AdGuard is an impressively flexible and customizable ad blocking extension that can block intrusive ads, website trackers, cookies and more. AdGuard's user base may not be as impressive as uBlock'sor Adblock Plus', but don't laugh at the ad blocker's credentials. AdGuard Anti-Tracking Filter is designed to remove all types of tracking with a filter list that is even larger than Ghostery. Version 4 of the expansion has just been released and offers an impressive array of new features and quality of life improvements that are worth checking out. Standalone and Browser AdGuard come in different flavors depending on your needs. There's a standalone desktop version for macOS, Windows, and more, as well as a browser extension that you can download and use in your favorite browser like Chrome! Although there is a paid plan that offers additional features, the browser extension can be used for free. Stealth Mode One of AdGuard's best features is its Stealth Mode, which offers a truly impressive range of options to block not only ads and trackers, but also various other online features that can compromise your security. You can hide searches so sites don't know what you typed to find them, block WebRTC entirely to protect your IP address, hide referrer information, block or restrict cookies, and more. This flexibility makes AdGuard one of the most feature-rich Chrome extensions. Ad Blocker Again, this is all great, but it's useless if an ad blocker doesn't block ads. AdGuard won't let you down with the ability to set up and customize multiple filters for all types of ads and trackers. It has pre-built categories for ad blocker filters, social media filters and more. You can select individual filters or all at once. All of these features are free in the browser extension, and the standalone version comes with a 60-day money-back guarantee, so there's no risk in trying the paid version! uBlock Origin is a free open source Chrome privacy extension that targets ad, tracker and other privacy threats. uBlock Origin is a fork of the original uBlock ad blocker. It's completely free, like most of the other extensions on this list, and is completely open source. It maintains impressive transparency that sets it apart from many competing products by providing a statistical breakdown of ad blocking performance during the current session. Easy Ad Blocking Premium filter lists are used to block intrusive ads, malware, and trackers, including AdServer List, Secondary Watch List, EasyPrivacy List, and Malware Domains. uBlock Origin also allows users to individually choose whether to block pop-ups, large media, cosmetic filtering, remove custom website fonts, JavaScript, and more, while keeping it lightweight and with minimal impact on device performance. With performance as a top priority, uBlock Origin is ideal for relatively resource-intensive browsers like Chrome, as it puts much less strain on your system than other low-resource competitors. Easy installation uBlock Origin can be downloaded from the add-ons/extensions page of your choice in your browser. It supports Firefox, Chrome, Opera, and Microsoft Edge, and unlike some competitors, uBlock Origin works right out of the box. The one-click install will set you up and protect you from ads and trackers, while some of uBlock's competitors still leave these features enabled and rely on you manually toggling them on and off, which can be a daunting prospect for the uninitiated. users. Extra Privacy uBlock is what it describes as a "broad spectrum content blocker". This means that it is more than an ad blocker, it is a comprehensive blocker for all types of annoying web content. In addition to blocking ads, it also blocks trackers, can disable prefetching to prevent your IP address from leaking to pages you haven't loaded yet, and can even help protect you from WebRTC leaks! Adblock Plus is one of themAd blocking solutions. It is free and available for many browsers. This is one of the most popular ad blocking solutions. Adblock Plus first made its mark in Firefox before being ported to Chrome. Its open source approach has spawned several notable competitors, with the similarly named but unrelated AdBlock using the source code of Adblock Plus. The organization behind it is responsible for one of the most comprehensive lists of filters, as well as support for 52 different languages. The Adblock Plus extension is also one of the newest. Ease of use It doesn't matter how good your product is if it's too hard to use, and Adblock Plus makes getting started easy. Just install the extension and you're good to go, but if you want to change the 'ad allowed' filter or whitelist individual sites, you'll need to dig into the settings. AdblockPlus even shows you how many ads it's blocking on a page, so you can see at a glance how effectively it's improving your browsing experience. Blocks ads and more It wouldn't be a good ad blocker if it didn't block ads, and Adblock Plus certainly doesn't disappoint. Although some users may question the inclusion of an acceptable ad scheme, Adblock Plus does a great job of blocking YouTube ads, pop-ups, pop-ups, interstitials, banner ads and more. All of this not only saves bandwidth, but also reduces page load times and even protects against ads that contain malware. Selective Ad Blocking As you may already know, some websites depend on their ads to function, and you may visit certain websites regularly and want to support them by placing ads on their pages. Adblock Plus allows you to configure whitelists where websites can display their ads, especially if they are not intrusive and do not interfere with your browsing session. It is above andBuilt-in Adblock Plus filter for acceptable ads, which can also be turned off if you don't agree with which ads are acceptable! Ghostery is a powerful open source privacy tool for Chrome users. Blocks ads, trackers and more with a paid tier for more functionality. Ghostery was built with privacy in mind to stop trackers and block ads. The extension blocks ads, website analytics, and adult trackers by default, but can be customized to suit your needs. Unblocked and unknown trackers are also anonymized when Advanced Tracking Protection is enabled. Tracker Blocker Ghostery can block an impressive number of different web trackers, including ad trackers, analytics, social media, comments, chat and more. You can even decide to whitelist or trust websites on a case-by-case basis. It even tells you how many trackers are on the site you're visiting and displays a handy little floating box that shows the number of trackers found so you can see exactly what's on the page and what's allowed/blocked. Smart Browsing Smart Browsing is a tiny, little feature that Ghostery uses if full ad/tracking blocking would cause the website to crash. Instead of blocking the tracker completely, Ghostery allows it to run but removes all personal information from it. Not only does this ensure that your websites continue to function properly while protecting your privacy, but it also means that any trackers that use browser fingerprints are useless. Ghostery changes the information it sends back, meaning your fingerprint is constantly changing, so you can't be traced. Ad Blocking This is all fine and dandy, but the main purpose of ad blocking is to block ads. Ghostery does not disappoint in this regard as it is more than capable of blocking banners, pop-ups and in-line ads for smoother, cleaner and faster web browsing. The best thing about all this is that the so-calledThe extension is available at a low cost. It's free to download and use, so there's no reason not to try it out for yourself. Each site offers a different experience, but most of them have one thing in common: they all try to create a personal profile of your interests by tracking your information or doing everything they can to force you to click on ads. These ads are sometimes intrusive and can load your system trying to load them. In other cases, they are deceptive and used to distribute malware to steal data. Some sites even use crypto code to mine crypto in the background using your hardware and electricity. Designed with privacy and security in mind, the ad blockers on this list will help you stay anonymous online and protect you from malicious or just plain annoying code and ads. A wide range of filter lists help identify trackers, block ads and blacklist hundreds of thousands of known online fraudsters. It's important to choose an ad blocker carefully, as its availability has led to many impersonators and scammers flooding the app stores with fakes that look almost like the real thing. If our list is not enough for you, take a look at the reviews and see how many people have installed the extension to dispel your doubts. However, if you want to revisit our list of the best ad-blocking extensions for Google Chrome, here it is. From $0.00 per month The best ad blocking extension for Google Chrome. It offers impressive customization options. ProPrivacy TrustScore: 9.7 out of 10 custom blockers Yes Custom whitelisting Yes Open source Yes From $0.00/month The best ad blocker for Chrome. It is one of the most original and best ad blocker for both Chrome and other browsers. ProPrivacy TrustScore: 9.6 out of 10 Customizable Blockers Yes Customizable Whitelists Yes Open Source No Browser extensions are a great way to get started with ad blocking, security and privacy, but they have limitations. You have to download the extension for every browser you have and they only work on that specific browser. This isn't necessarily a bad thing, but it does mean that all other apps you use outside of the browser will continue to show ads. Instead, you can look for alternative ways to block ads while browsing the web, such as: B. Offline apps, VPNs with extra features, or ad blockers downloaded through a router.
