agreement signed by Middle East Broadcasting Center and Qatar TV) to make a drama series on the life of Caliph Omar, scheduled to be aired during the Ramadan of 2011.[30] The chief of MBC group Waleed al Ibrahim stated that, the drama would not aim at profits:[31] The dramatic work is not regarded from the profit or loss perspectives. — Waleed al Ibrahim, chief of MBC group[31] Saudi producers, the Middle East Broadcasting Center (MBC), said the series is the largest ever Arabic production, with 30,000 actors and a technical team from 10 different countries who toiled 300 days to make the 31-part series.[32] The director Ali said that building a replica of Mecca and the surrounding area was a challenge that faced him until he and the crew finally chose a location in Morocco. The series needed a huge crew amount to 500 actors, actresses, and extras in one single day.[33] Ali also pointed out, several scenes in the series were difficult to shoot like which elephant treads on one of the actors. The major members of the board were: Yusuf al-Qaradawi[34] Akram Zia Omari[34] Akram [36] as well as title[37] and ending theme[38] also. Moreover, the sets of ancient Mecca and Medina and other sites in Arabic dramas. Music The original soundtrack was composed by Turkish musician Fahir Atakoglu. A nasheed or Arabic song praising Omar and describing a complete archive of the serial was featured after the scene of his assassination in the ending episode. The nasheed, entitled "Salamun Alayka Ya Omar Al Faarouq", was sung by the Kuwaiti Quran reciter Mishary Al-Afasy.[39] Receptions from Islamic religious scholars Saleh Al-Fawzan,[40] Grand Mufti of Saudi Arabia (Abdul-Aziz ibn Abdullah Al Shaykh),[40][41] Al-Azhar University, Abdul Aziz bin Fahd,[42][43] Muhammad Al-Munajid, Abdullah bin Zayed Al Nahyan,[44] Saleh al-Maghamsi and many other Islamic scholars viewed the series negatively.[45] The Grand Mufti of Senior Religious Scholars, Abdul-Aziz ibn Abdullah Al Shaykh, criminalized the dramatic action saying that those behind "Umar Al Farooq" series have committed a "grave mistake and a crime" by spending their money on the production of such TV work. He also said that he is against the idea of producing the series that "displays the biography of the rightly guided caliphs in a manner that is doomed to offend in these symbols." He added, "These films and series do not bring or mean goodness, and whatever those who prepared it who claim intellectual enlightenment, they are wrong in what they have walked and know that what they offer is dangerous, wrong and crime. "The Sheikh did not differ in that from what was issued by Al-Azhar Al-Sharif, who had forbidden the embodiment of the Prophets, the Companions, the House of the Standing Committee and a member of the Standing Committee and a member of the Senior Scholars Committee for Issuing Fatwas, forbade watching the series and a member of the Senior Scholars Committee and a member of the Senior Sc recalling "the consensus of scholars and the Muslim World League to prohibit the representation of the Companions, may God be pleased with them." Everything that comes from Qatar is doubtful of its intentions Many writers wondered why this seasonal controversy takes place around the Ramadan series ?, recalling the controversy raised by Mustafa El Akkad's "The Message".[40][41] Salman al-Awda,[46] Yūsuf al-Qaradawī, Yasir Qadhi,[47] Alī al-Sallabī and Khaled al-Musleh[48] viewed the series, in a video of his official YouTube channel, he said, "99.9% drama or movie in the name of Islam today is not 100% Islamic and no one can give fatwa that watching them, it will be best and harmfree option. September 23, 2013 Iran Nour TV September, 2013 United Kingdom Islamic accounts, there are two different stories found about the conversion of Umar, the story which has been depicted in the story, some scholars argue that the story is not authentic or reasonably weak according to reliable chain rather than declaring authenticity to the second story of conversion, and Al-As ibn Wa'il saved the converted Umar from the actack of enraged people.[52] In the events of the Islamic prophet Muhammad's living era, Muhammad himself, his children and wives were not depicted but many direct actions of him have been shown redirected from any other sahaba near to him for the restrictions and limitations of Muhammad's visual depiction in the Islamic world. Although in a sequence before the death of Abu Bakr, there was a shadow depiction of Aisha shown silently conversing with her father. The dress code of male companions after conversion period was also controversial, mostly for wearing gowns below ankle, which was strongly prohibited by Muhammad, and tradition says that, all the companions behind of Khalid bin Walid have been shown to give the slogan "ya Muhammada" (O, for Muhammad), which was a subject of controversy about historicity among some salafi clerics. They argued that it could not be told by them because calling on any other except Allah is a form of polytheism (Shirk).[53] Historical reference says that Umayyah ibn Khalaf by himself. As for the role of Omar is one of the first tools of the work technically where the strange cold performance and the rigidity of atures and divisions of his face, even with events that require a human interaction natural and unchanging [54] The series also missed the historical role of the tranch and Taif so that the work was limited to the tribes of Quraish as well as the tribe of Ghutfan and absent from work tribes that had a presence in the historical biography of these conversations, such as the tribe of Selim and Kenana The Bani Asad tribe, the Hawazin tribe and other Arab tribes on which the Arab community of the Arab tribes on which the Arab community of the Arabian Peninsula was built at that time.
