After finding an editor he liked, I was informed that what he had written was not an adult book, but a series of children's books. Where do you have the ideas for your characters? Are the books based on your childhood? The Heffley family is based on my own family. Greg is a combination of my worst childhood moments. I try to remember funny memories of my childhood. Then I add those memories to the fiction blender. Sometimes they end up in the books. How long do you take to write a book? A book by Wimpy Kid has been doing nine months; six months to think of all the jokes (I need 350), one month to write, and two months to illustrate. What's your favorite book in the show? What's your advice for the aspiring writers? First, I would encourage an illustrative aspirant or authora an idea and nourish it. Although it may take many years to develop a winning idea, it is worth the effort. The second step is to try to write a story that resembles someone you admire. This will help you understand your style and make it easier to create your own. This will help you develop your style. Find someone willing to give an honest criticism. Read more: more.
